The Ukrainian land has given the world many renowned scientists and pioneers in technology. One of them was Yurii Knorozov, a brilliant linguist who, in the early 1950s, became the first to decipher the ancient Maya script – the writing system of the pre-Columbian Maya civilization of Mesoamerica. Like many other Ukrainian-born scientists, Knorozov was later labeled Soviet or Russian by the USSR – a typical example of Russian imperialist appropriation, erasing Ukrainian identity in favor of its own narrative.
